PROFESSOR LJUNGQVIST

Still active today at the age of 93, he started his anti-doping career 53 years ago in Sweden. Since then he has been fighting doping in sports from leading positions in the major global sports organizations: World Athletics (former IAAF), the International Olympic Committee (IOC), and the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA – which he co-founded in 1999). In 2012, he expanded his work by establishing a foundation with the mission to fight the use of doping substances also in society, specifically targeting youth – Professor Arne Ljungqvist Anti Doping Foundation (PALJF).

Professor Arne Ljungqvist:

“I am of course immensely honored and grateful for this monument. Et Purus touches the world of sports as well as our society. It is celebrating pure health in all its forms, as well as carrying a strong statement for winning with excellence – by playing fair and embracing the truth.”

ET PURUS – THE STORY

On his 80th birthday reception in May 2011, Professor Arne Ljungqvist was awarded a sculpture idea created to honor his then 40-year global crusade against doping in sports and in society. It portrays the classic hand gesture "No 1", used all over the world by all cultures, celebrating performance victory. A ring on the index fingertip symbolizes excellence performed with a clean and doping-free body (the "window" into an "inspected and a clean body").

The monument was sculpted by renowned artist Sassona Norton. It was named "Et Purus" in Latin, meaning "And Clean". Ten years later, with substantial support by Fabège and other parties, the first bronze monument was unveiled in Monaco – the home of World Athletics – by HSH Prince Albert II – Et Purus No 1. Now, the time has come for Et Purus No 2, in Professor Ljungqvist's home city of Stockholm.

The sculpture Et Purus is intended, in a series of 20, to be placed in cities around the world. As a reminder of the conscious choice to stay away from doping – as a pure and healthy citizen and as a clean and competitive athlete.
